Hollywood, Health & Society Announces Call for Entries for the 2021 Sentinel Awards

Annual event celebrates fact-based storytelling in TV entertainment

LOS ANGELES, June 1, 2021—Hollywood, Health & Society (HH&S), a program of the USC Annenberg Norman Lear Center, is now accepting entries for the 2021 Sentinel Awards, which honor outstanding TV storylines that inform, educate and motivate viewers to make choices for healthier and safer lives.

Submissions from broadcast, cable and streaming network shows are eligible, and represent a range of topics on health, safety and security. Entries are being accepted June 1–July 2, 2021. The honorees, announced in Fall 2021, will be selected based on accuracy, entertainment value and benefit to the viewing audience. Today, fighting widespread misinformation with facts has never been more important. For more than 20 years, HH&S has been helping TV storytellers find the facts they need to “get it right.” The annual awards are a positive reminder that TV entertainment can also educate and motivate audiences to make informed choices in leading healthier and safer lives.

Among the shows recognized last year: This is Us (NBC), New Amsterdam (NBC), For Life (ABC), Orange Is the New Black (Netflix), Pose (FX), All Rise (CBS), The Good Fight (CBS All Access), I May Destroy You (HBO), Normal People (Hulu) and Everything’s Gonna Be Okay (Freeform). The 13 honorees shined a light on racism, abortion, addiction/recovery, criminal justice, sexual assault, immigration and more. It’s no wonder that The Hollywood Reporter called it an evening honoring “TV’s toughest topics.”

Funding for Hollywood, Health & Society comes from the CDC, The SCAN Foundation, the California Health Care Foundation, the John Pritzker Family Fund, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and NSquare, among others. The program serves as a free resource that supports the entertainment industry through expert consultations and briefings, panel discussions, screenings, a quarterly newsletter, social media and more.
